Common Currency

The Shared Inheritance of Ulster and North America

'I am proud to be of Ulster Scots stock. I am proud to be, also, of Irish stock. I share these roots with millions and millions of Americans, now over 40 million Americans.'

PRESIDENT WILLIAM JEFFERSON CLINTON, SPEAKING IN BELFAST IN 1995

Common Currency is a one-day conference aimed at anyone with an interest in the deep and myriad connections between Ulster and North America across a broad range of themes including: history, music, commerce and the migration experience.

In addition to live music, the presentations, delivered by a mix of respected academics and cultural commentators, will demonstrate that the contribution of Ulster migrants to the development of North American society is more diverse, complex and important than the prevailing orthodoxy or the simple traditional narrative of frontiersmen clearing wilderness and fighting Native Americans, while living in the backwoods inventing bluegrass music, distilling moonshine, and waiting to become president.

The conference will reveal the nature of the deep relationship between Ulster and North America as will be evident in Alister McReynolds' thought-provoking presentation, 'The gentle and thoughtful Scotch-Irish' – their contribution to civilisation rather than bloody empire creation', while Dr Johanne Devlin Trew will explore the many contemporary connections. Any discourse on Ulster and North America must cover the massive movement of people across the Atlantic and this topic will be addressed by Dr Linde Lunney in her talk on that seminal event, the 1718 migration, and Prof. William J. Smyth who will shed light on the migration of Ulster families to British North America and the emergence of Toronto, 'the Belfast of Canada'. The shared cultural contribution will also be evaluated as we benefit from the insight of musician and Director of the Belfast Nashville Songwriters Festival, Colin Magee, who will also provide a musical contribution at what promises to be a memorable event. Common Currency will thus deliver an engaging mix of music, presentations and debate and will appeal to the student of Ulster and North American history and the lay person who wishes to learn more.

DID YOU KNOW THE DOLLAR SYMBOL – $ – WAS DEvised BY AN ULSTERMAN?

Oliver Pollock, from the Bredry area of County Tyrone, emigrated to America in 1760 and became a successful merchant in Philadelphia, Cuba and New Orleans. He used much of his wealth to finance the revolutionaries in the War of Independence. He is often credited with inventing the dollar symbol.
