A Directory of Ulster Doctors (who qualified before 1901)

By R.S.J. Clarke

PUBLISHED IN 2 VOLUMES

The north of Ireland has always produced a large number of doctors, not only for Ireland generally, but for the armed forces and for the wider world. This volume is a directory of all those doctors who qualified before 1901.

There are nearly six thousand names with biographical notes on all, including details of parentage and dates of birth, marriage and death, and medical education and career.

This directory is therefore of special value to anyone studying medical or local history and also for many genealogists tracing Ulster families. The information is derived from a wide variety of sources, published and unpublished, set in the context of the development of the medical profession over several centuries.

In its final stages the directory has received generous support from the Ulster Medical Society and an enthusiastic introduction from Sir Peter Froggatt, former Vice-Chancellor, Queen's University Belfast.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Richard Clarke is emeritus professor of anaesthetics at Queen's University and on retirement took on the role of honorary archivist of the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast. He has been able to use his experience in writing A History of the Royal Victoria Hospital as a basis for further research on doctors throughout the province. This is in addition to forty years of work on gravestones in Down, Antrim and Belfast, published by the Ulster Historical Foundation, and a lifetime of work on family history.

P&P COSTS: This is a substantial publication running to some 1,344 pages in 2 hardback volumes, the combined weight is approx. 2.9 KGs. P&P costs have been kept as economical as possible.
